

I am writing because I am concerned about the effect that increasing Low Power FM (LPFM's) may have on existing radio stations, especially those which use translators. We listen as a family to KLVA-FM, which serves to bring family-friendly programming to our local community. If KLVA were to be displaced by an LPFM broadcaster providing other programming, our community would definitely feel the impact in a negative way. With all of the programming on both television and radio that includes profanity and inappropriate material for children and discerning adults, it is imperative that we allow stations which provide wholesome programming to remain strong on the air. Thank you. Janine Miller
